

Highlights from Saunders College of Business Alumni

Why Saunders/RIT?

Saunders offers a strong business program rooted in practical commercial experience. The program strikes a balance between having a robust academic spirit and inculcating an enterprising outlook among students through the myriad opportunities on offer. My decision to attend Saunders was motivated by the flexibility I had to choose from a variety of courses that were tailored to equipping me with practical business experience. Further, I found the program to be structured to incubate widely diverging interests that a candidate could have at the time of joining a business school.

Saunders support network:

Personal attention from professors that was assured owing to a small class size was one of the aspects that attracted me to Saunders. One of the most important takeaways from my education was the incredible support I received and the relationships I built, not just with peers, but also from the staff, faculty and alumni. The experience available with this support network and their real world advice rounded off an extraordinary education.

A tight-knit community fostering growth:

I greatly enjoyed being part of the close-knit student body while participating in activities. I elicited great learning from the breadth of activities I was fortunate to be a part of during my time at Saunders such as working as a graduate assistant for a professor and leading the Graduate Management Association, I was exposed to matchless learning and built lasting relationships. These experiences were memorable and something that I continue to cherish.
