

Highlights from Saunders College of Business Alumni

Why Saunders/RIT?

As a undergraduate student at Beijing Jiaotong University (BJTU), I was introduced to several RIT professors during their trip to the university. During that time, I learned about the Saunders business programs and the professors' devotion to their work. I was skeptical since RIT is not highly ranked, but the professors really care about you and will share every piece of their knowledge to help you develop.

Masters in Finance, Class of 2013

Employer: Siemens
Title: Financial Analyst
Home Country: China

Real-world experience before leaving campus:

During my time at RIT, I had a co-op with Saunders Student Consulting Group. It was a unique opportunity to gain real-world experience. Everything I learned in the classroom could be applied in practice. At the consulting group, there were many different cases to study, with real-world clients and issues needing to be solved. What is learned from faculty members is applicable in real-life situations and the variety of classes well prepares you for intensive industry work. I used every aspect of knowledge learned in school.

Saunders provides access:

The most important advantage gained at RIT - in a word, ACCESS. I accessed relevant knowledge to be up to date with what the business world is asking for. I accessed the necessary skill set and professional tooling learned through projects. I has access to professors, who were willing to share their stories and help guide your career and give you the tools to build yourself the best way you can. RIT is a wide open door.

"At Saunders, you're not 1 of 100. There is individualized attention to determine what's beneficial for you. The professors are diverse and understand the challenges faced by international students. They will help guide which classes to take in order to develop the skills for the best possible chance at getting a job."
